Tuba City Humane Society 60,000

Tuba City Humane Society is an organization working in the Navajo Reservation in Arizona. Their mission is to help stray dogs and cats with an assortment of veterinary care as well as finding homes for them. Made up entirely of volunteers, they provide care to the large number of stray animals around the reservation, and support owners with access to basic veterinary care. These grants are for the rescue, rehabilitation, and veterinary care of the animals.

Village Help for South Sudan 10,000

Village Help for South Sudan's mission is to support and enable groups in remote villages of South Sudan to do their own development work. They do this by partnering with members of the diaspora to lead projects that assist their villages to assess needs and priorities, develop plans to address the needs, and then complete implementation projects to meet the objectives of the plan. They focus on education, health care, renewable energy, clean water, and sanitation. This grant is for general operating support.

Water is Life Kenya 40,000

Water is Life Kenya works in drought-prone southern Kenya. Their mission is to improve community access to clean water, improve community management of water sources, and improve community income derived from water-related activities. Since 2007 WILK has completed 7 clean water projects, trained 49 livestock farmer groups, given over 96 microloans, and transformed the lives of over 80,000 people and their livestock. Recently they launched the pilot of a new program called, “Hope for Widows,” which provides skills and microfinancing to widows to empower this extremely marginalized, impoverished group economically and socially. These grants are in support of the drilling cost of Lyaarat community borehole in Kajado County, Kenya, and the construction of infrastructure, like water tank, cattle troughs, latrines, at Kalesirua Community Borehole.

Welfare Rights Initiative

30,000

Welfare Rights Initiative works to eliminate educational barriers for marginalized people—especially low-income girls and young women of color. WRI was created in 1995 in response to the negative stereotypes of individuals living in poverty that were influencing policy changes. WRI is located at Hunter College, a constituent college of the City University of New York, where low-income and welfare-eligible students, especially women, can access education as a pipeline from crisis to opportunities. WRI’s students come from households supported by public assistance, they enroll in college to gain skills and credentials needed to improve their lives. This grant is for general operating support.

Wellspring House

5,000

Founded in 1981, Wellspring House is a leading non-profit organization with programs extending throughout the 20 cities and towns of Massachusetts’ North Shore region. Their mission is to inspire families and adults to achieve employment and financial security through stable housing, education, job training and career readiness. Wellspring’s goals and objectives pair together the two essential components of family health and stability; stable housing and access to wages that cover a true cost of living. This grant is in support of running a multifaceted Career and Education Readiness curriculum and coaching program for 75-80 students.
